Toolkit Purpose

This toolkit is meant to make promoting and celebrating Family Health & Fitness Day – Saturday, June 11, 2022 – in your community a little easier! This toolkit is designed to help you generate positive media coverage and support for your Family Health & Fitness Day activities and ultimately the work of your agency and the benefits you bring to your community.

This kit includes template media materials, such as:

- media alerts for special events,
- press releases for before and after the event,
- fact sheets,
- social media posts for before and after the event,
- web ads,
- sample web and email copy that you can use in your publications, and
- a checklist of activities.

Feel free to customize these materials with localized information, quotes and details that best meet your needs.

When using social media, please make sure you are tagging NRPA in your Facebook, Twitter and Instagram posts and using the #NRPAFamilyFitDay.

Don't forget, we want to see your successes too — send us photos and videos from your Family Health & Fitness Day events or the creative ways you have used the marketing materials so we can amplify your work!

If you have questions or need further assistance, please don't hesitate to contact me:

We hope this toolkit helps you generate great support for Family Health & Fitness Day!

2022 Family Health & Fitness Day Fact Sheet

- NRPA's Family Health & Fitness Day — celebrated the second Saturday in June each year — promotes the importance of parks and recreation in keeping communities healthy. This year it lands on June 11, 2022.
- Agencies everywhere are encouraged to participate by inviting families to get active and healthy at their local park or recreation center, or by safely hosting an event, such as a health and wellness fair or family fun run/walk, on Saturday, June 11. Members of the healthcare and public health community also are encouraged to participate, even as sponsors.
- Various research studies have confirmed that community parks and recreation, green spaces and time outdoors are critical for creating healthy, active and sustainable communities. As we have witnessed throughout the coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic, parks and recreation has played a critical role in supporting our mental and physical well-being, and Family Health & Fitness Day is a great opportunity to celebrate this. The key messaging, in the next section, includes research and articles that describe these benefits.
- In addition to celebrating at your local parks and recreation on June 11 with events, you can get involved in Family Health & Fitness Day by:
 - Using this toolkit to promote your health and wellness programs and activities via digital channels and local media
 - Using the social media images and #NRPAFamilyFitDay on your social media channels leading up to and on Saturday, June 11
 - Highlighting the ways your agency helps your community stay healthy on your website, social media channels and promotional materials. Examples could include:
 - Innovative programming throughout COVID-19
 - Mental health benefits of visiting your parks and participating in your programs
 - Physical activities and experiences visitors can participate in
 - Connections to other essential health service providers in your community
- Join the conversation on NRPA's Facebook, Twitter and Instagram using #NRPAFamilyFitDay.
- For additional information, visit www.nrpa.org/familyfitness.

Research to Share

There is a growing body of evidence that shows how parks and recreation supports health and wellness. Below is a list of messaging and articles that you can pull from to show how beneficial parks and recreation is to your local community — and the many reasons to celebrate it. These can be shared on your social media channels, in-text for to cite statements you use in your communications for Family Health & Fitness Day — or anytime in the future!

- Living close to parks and other recreation infrastructure is consistently related to higher physical activity levels for both adults and youth. Moreover, parks provide a connection to nature, which studies demonstrate relieves stress, tightens interpersonal relationships and improves mental health.
- Parks and recreation and the professionals who make it happen are essential. Here are five statements with supporting research that showcase the fundamental role of parks and recreation, including how parks and recreation promotes health and wellness.
- As little as 20 minutes a day spent outdoors helps reduce stress. According to a poll conducted by the National Recreation and Park Association, 58 percent of U.S. adults spend more than 30 minutes a day outside.
- Local park and recreation agencies are uniquely suited to serve as Community Wellness Hubs, connecting all members of the community to programs and services that advance health equity, improve health outcomes and enhance quality of life. These three videos explore the lasting impact of Community Wellness Hubs, how planning and partnerships support access to health foods and health and wellness services, and how three agencies launched Community Wellness Hubs during the pandemic.
- In a March 2022 Parks & Recreation magazine article, contributors Cheri Ruane, Julia Africa, Chuck Raymond, Gary Hilderbrand and Chris Reed share how parks can serve as critical infrastructure to strengthen public health and safety.
- In a September 2021 Parks & Recreation magazine article, NRPA staff Colleen Pittard, Tiff Cunin and Allison Colman share how parks and recreation is a vital community-based solution to support healthy aging for older adults.
- In a June 2021 Parks & Recreation magazine article, NRPA introduced Elevating Health Equity Through Parks and Recreation: A Framework for Action, which is designed to help park and recreation professionals intentionally advance health equity by applying a racial equity lens when designing, implementing and evaluating programs and services, and when developing infrastructure, maintenance and operations plans.

- According to the June 2021 NRPA Park Pulse, 93 percent of U.S. adults say their mental health is improved by services offered by local park and recreation professionals and agencies. The top three mental health opportunities found in parks and recreation include: socializing with friends and family, spending time in nature, and exercising.
- According to the November 2021 NRPA Park Pulse, three in four U.S. adults say it is important that they have access to public walking, hiking or biking trails near their home. The typical park and recreation agency manages or maintains 12 miles of trails, though that number can be well over 100 miles, especially for agencies serving over 250,000 residents.
- Parks and recreation provide youth with opportunities that promote increased physical activity; social interactions and friendships; and skill development, like teamwork and respect, through their sports programs. According to the March 2021 NRPA Park Pulse, 98 percent of U.S. adults agree that it is important to provide youth with equitable access to sports opportunities.
- According to the 2021 NRPA Out-of-School Time \(OST\) Report, more than four in five park and recreation agencies offer OST programs. The top benefits of OST programs include childcare for working parents and/or caregivers, offering children a safe place outside of school hours, opportunities to engage in physical activity through play, exercise and sports, social opportunities, and chances to connect youth to peers.
- According to NRPA's Parks and Recreation: Advancing Community Health and Well-Being report, 9 in 10 park and recreation agencies take specific actions to ensure their health and wellness programs and services promote health equity
- The impact of adverse childhood experiences and trauma on youth mental and behavioral health outcomes is a rising concern in communities across the country. Local park and recreation agencies provide ample opportunities for youth to build positive social connections. Through the Mentoring in Parks and Rec initiative, NRPA supports agencies in their efforts to build effective and evidence-based mentorship programs that connect youth with caring and compassionate mentors while strengthening connections across their community.
- As providers of, and connection points to, public health services and community conditions that protect and promote health and well-being, parks and recreation plays a vital role in addressing substance use and mental health disorders. Parks and Recreation: Addressing Substance Use and Mental Health Disorders provides resources to support park and recreation professionals as they address substance use and mental health disorders in their communities.
- This NRPA-funded research report explores the health equity benefits of parks and their economic impacts, written by Mychal Cohen, Kimberly Burrowes & Peace Gwam of the Urban Institute.

2022 Family Health & Fitness Day Media Outreach – “How To”

The following are general guidelines for conducting media outreach for special events you may be hosting on June 11 for Family Health & Fitness Day.

Leveraging the Press Release

To announce your involvement in Family Health & Fitness Day and what activities will be taking place on June 11, customize the Pre-event Press Release template on page 11 and distribute it to appropriate reporters, bloggers and/or broadcast media in your local area.

1. You'll want to send the release out at the end of May or beginning of June to journalists and reporters, and to TV/radio stations approximately two days before an event you want them to attend.
2. Search online for the “news desk” emails and/or submission guidelines of your local TV stations and radio stations.
3. Search for the contact information for reporters and publications in your local area that cover topics related to parks, the outdoors and community affairs. Be sure to pitch to only one reporter from each newspaper/print agency. It is a good idea to review the stories the reporter writes to get a feel for what they are most interested in so that you can tailor your outreach to meet their interests. Most reporters prefer email.
4. Search online for bloggers, social media influencers or “fitfluencers” in your area and invite them to your event; these social media journalists are powerful influencers and can virally spread the word about the events you have going on for Family Health & Fitness Day.
5. Once you have your list together, prepare your pitches. Make sure you tailor the pitch for the type of outlet and personalize it as much as possible for the journalist or blogger you are contacting. Keep it brief.
6. Customize the press release template with the appropriate information, as marked with brackets and yellow highlight, EX: [NAME].
7. You can distribute your press release on any newswires you subscribe to or use regularly. This will give you added visibility in newsrooms and with online media.
8. In addition to wire distribution, reach out directly via email to journalists and bloggers. Insert your pitch and paste the text of the press release into the email.
9. Put an engaging tag line or sentence in the “Subject” line of the email to entice reporters.

10. Once you have sent your release, follow up with a phone call to reporters. Be sure to have a short pitch ready, and be prepared to answer questions about why your event or story is a “must see/cover.”

Inviting Press to Your Event with the Media Advisory

If you are hosting a special event on June 11 and would like to invite reporters to cover your event on site:

1. It's a good idea to send Media Advisories to journalists and reporters at least two weeks in advance and to TV/radio stations approximately two days before an event.
2. Search online for the “news desk” emails and/or submission guidelines of your local TV stations and radio stations.
3. Search for the contact information for reporters and publications in your local area that cover topics related to parks, the outdoors, and community affairs. Be sure to pitch to only one reporter from each newspaper/print agency. Most reporters prefer email.
4. Consider inviting local bloggers to your event as well or creating a special opportunity for them to come out and get a sneak peek of your Family Health & Fitness Day event. These social media journalists are powerful influencers and can virally spread the word about the events you have going on for Family Health & Fitness Day.
5. Customize the media alert template with the appropriate information, as marked.
6. Write a brief, one-paragraph pitch to the reporter, and attach the Media Advisory as a PDF or Word Document, or paste the text into the email, beginning with “Media Advisory.”
7. Put an engaging tag line or sentence in the “Subject” line of the email to entice reporters.
8. Once you have sent your Media Advisory, follow up with a phone call to reporters you are particularly interested in having attend. Be sure to have a short pitch ready, and be prepared to answer questions about why your event is a “must see.”
9. Consider sending a post-event press release to generate coverage after the event. It is a good idea to send this immediately following the event or the next morning. Often this means drafting most of the release in advance, and adding a few pertinent details afterward. We've included a template for a Post-Event Press Release on page 12 that you can use.

10. Reach back out to the reporters that you previously contacted. If you can, offer footage from the event or high-resolution photos (cell phone photos are great, too!). To learn more about photographing your event/park, check out this article from the May 2021 issue of Parks & Recreation magazine.

Tips and Tactics

- Remember that timeliness is a big factor in press coverage.
- Try to keep the message brief. One page is best — do not exceed two.
- Don't forget to add complete contact information. If a reporter is interested, they may wish to email or call you with questions or requests for clarification.
- Write using short paragraphs and sentences, and in the third person — don't refer to yourself as "I" or "we," except in a direct quote.
- Avoid testimonials or other promotional language. A press release is news; not advertising.
- Don't be discouraged if you do not receive interest, or if a reporter doesn't make it to your event. Reporters receive hundreds of press releases every day and cover news based on many factors (timeliness, the amount of current events taking place/space, editor approval, capacity, etc.). It's never personal.
- If a reporter does email or call with interest, be sure to respond in a very timely manner.
